

Manhattan College honored

Manhattan College was recently named on the President's Higher Education Community Service Honor Roll, an annual, national list launched in 2006 that recognizes institutions' commitment to and achievement in helping local communities and the nation as a whole.

A total of 851 institutions applied for the 2010 honor roll and 641 were selected this year.

In a statement, Manhattan College President Brennan O'Donnell said the school has a "long-standing emphasis on integrating social justice and public service in the classroom and within the campus community."

Manhattan College was the only school in Bronx to make the list.
